

ABSTRACT

A method includes determining the node ID information of a second node device of a multi-node computer system. The method stores the node ID information of the second node device on a storage device located on a first node device of the multi-node computer system. The first node device is connected to the second node device and the second node device includes a storage device containing node ID information for a third node device connected to the second node device.

10

20346972

FOOTNOTES